

Recycle and Rubbish Bins

What is rubbish?

Things we do not need anymore and cannot be used by anyone else.

For example, empty packets, bottles and cans, leftover food, broken things.

Draw or write 5 things that you have put in a bin in your home this week.

A large, empty trapezoidal shape with a black outline, intended for a student to draw or write five items they have put in a bin at home during the week.

Bins that you keep outside your home

How many bins do you have outside your home?

A small, empty rectangular box with a black outline, intended for a student to write the number of bins they have outside their home.

People have different coloured bins for different things.
What colour are your bins?

A large, empty rectangular box with a black outline, intended for a student to write the colors of their bins.

The bin lorries come and collect your rubbish

What happens to the things you put in your bins?

Land fill

Some of your rubbish gets taken to a big rubbish dump.

This is called 'Land fill'.

The rubbish stays in the landfill.

Recycle

Some of your rubbish gets recycled.

The rubbish is sorted so the same types of things are all together.

Each thing is mashed down so it can be used to make something new.

How do you know what to put in each bin?

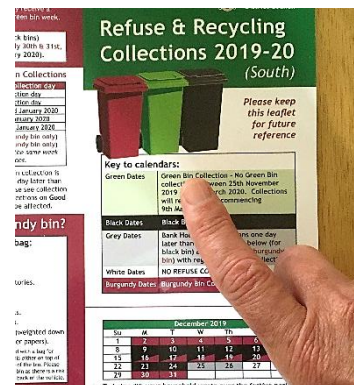

The District Council or City Council where you live sorts out your bins. They choose what you can recycle and what happens to your rubbish.

What is the name of your District Council or City Council?

Each District Council or City Council has different rules about what people should put in their bins.

They should give you a list to show you what you should put in each of your bins.

Have you got a list from your District Council or City Council about your bins?

YES

Where do you keep your list?
